Four versions of one logo.

Same brand, four shapes. Pick the one that fits the space you are filling, rather than squeezing the primary logo into a place it was never meant to go.

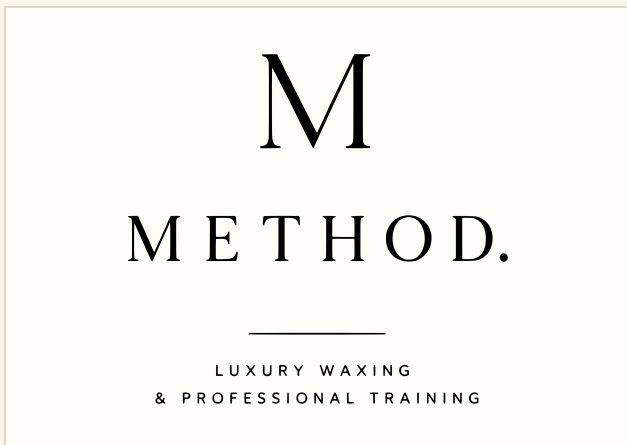

Primary

The full lockup. Signage, the front of the website, anywhere someone meets the brand for the first time.

Horizontal

Wide and short. Website headers, email signatures, the top of a letterhead.

Stacked

The lockup without the arch, for narrow or busy placements where fine lines would be lost.

Wordmark

Type alone, with or without the tagline. Use when the arch already appears nearby.

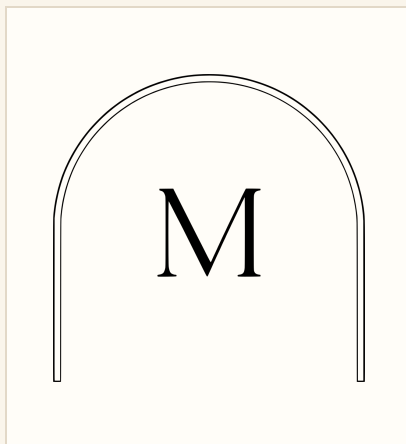

The M does the small work.

The arch is built from hairlines, and hairlines disappear when they shrink. Below roughly 40 pixels, stop using the arch and let the M carry the brand on its own.

Icon

Browser tabs, app icons, a foil stamp, a wax seal.

Submark

Square version for profile pictures on Instagram, Facebook and Google.

Submark, reversed

The same mark for dark backgrounds.

How each one holds up as it shrinks. The arch softens and fades. The M stays itself all the way down.

M 88PX

Give it room to breathe.

Keep a margin around the logo at least as tall as the M in the wordmark. Nothing crosses that line: no text, no photo edge, no other logo.

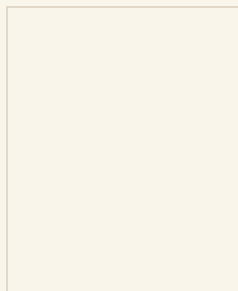

The measure is the M. Take the height of the M in the METHOD wordmark and use it as the minimum margin on all four sides. It scales with the logo, so it works at any size.

Minimum sizes. Smaller than this and the hairlines break up in print or blur on screen.

MARK	PRINT	SCREEN
Primary	1 in wide	110 px
Horizontal	1.5 in wide	170 px
Wordmark	0.9 in wide	100 px
Icon, the M	0.2 in wide	16 px

Cream, ink, emerald, copper.

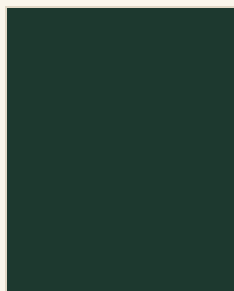

Black is the default. White is for dark backgrounds. Emerald and copper are there for the moments a single brand colour is called for. Nothing else.

On cream
The default. Always the first choice.

On emerald
Use the white files, never the black ones.

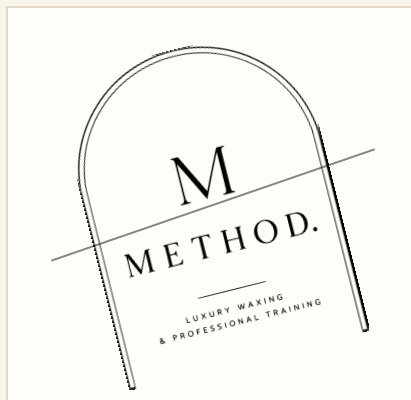

Copper
For warmth, on pale neutral grounds only.

Six ways to break it.

Every one of these has happened to a good logo. The files you have been given already do the right thing, so the rule is simply to use them as they are.

Do not stretch it. Scale proportionally, always.

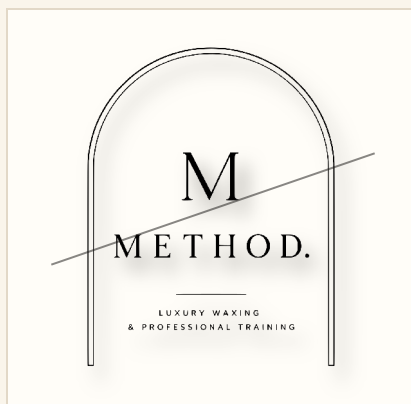

Do not tilt it. The arch stands upright.

Do not recolour it. Four colourways, no others.

Do not put black on dark. Use the white files.

Do not add effects. No shadows, glows, or outlines.

Do not lose contrast. Keep it clearly readable.

Which file do I use?

SVG, PDF and EPS are vector: they scale to any size, from a business card to a window decal, with no loss of quality. PNG and JPG are fixed size and made for screens.
